Note we have added the following as it is a very common question: "We have found after assessing many hockey players that skill and competency can be found at all levels and this is very much more the case for the female programs as they are everywhere, either by choice, or by amount of competition from the integrated streams when coming from the larger associations. When asking for the team name it is not being used as part of the assessment and it is to know where the players are coming from. In our programs we have players from T1, T2 and T3 Associations and they all perform very well in Vancouver. When it comes to team placement we use a blind evaluation method for the assessors per the following: assigned pinny numbers and then rotated pinny numbers for the second session and between two sessions with no names attached to the assessment sheets we should see a cross reference when consistent performance is observed. If required, we come and watch your regular season games to gather more information. In the odd circumstance we have asked player(s) to sit part of the second session so we can observe how the other players perform, and to allow different combinations and touch time with the puck during the assessment games." - Brian Passmore*

The Monarch Spring Team is an inclusive program. Our favourite type of players and parents have the following characteristics: player is respectful on and off the ice and represents their home association and Monarchs, is coachable, understands and is willing to work on the fundamental hockey skills, competitive and driven, not dirty (pointless penalties hurt at tournaments), parent can leave the player alone, and the player can speak to the head coach about their personal performance and ask questions. Head Coaches of our programs will not speak about another player's performance with other parents and our coaches will teach everyone.
